

Dunedin has joined the many cities in the world in which a University of the Third Age has been founded

Beginning in France in the mid seventies the U3A movement has now spread to most countries and has many hundreds of thousands of members.

U3A is a response to the idea that human life is divided into three periods: firstly, childhood and schooling; secondly, child rearing and work; and thirdly retirement.

The third age is seen to provide the greatest opportunities for learning and understanding because it is during this period of retirement that the idea of a university as a community of those who seek greater understanding through learning can be put into practice.

The unique characteristics of U3A

- Learning topics are selected by the members
- Indepth courses are planned by members
- Opportunities for reading, research and discussion are provided
- Presenters/facilitators are usually members of the groups
- The company of others who enjoy learning is ensured
- The atmosphere for learning is informal and friendly
- There are no examinations
- There are no compulsory activities
- Courses take place during daylight hours
- Costs are minimal and within the reach of everybody

The Programme

Although colonised after 1769 largely by immigrants from the United Kingdom, surprisingly little is known about the composition and character of the 'British' migratory flows which arrived in New Zealand. Who were the immigrants? Where did they come from? England - Wales - Scotland - Ireland? From which parts of England - Cornwall - Yorkshire - London? From the highlands of Scotland or from the Borders? And the Irish - from Ulster or Munster - Irish Celtic? -Anglo-Irish? - Scots-Irish? What was the national and ethnic composition of the inflow? Did the ethnic balance change?

This series of seminars will explore these and allied questions and try to shed some new light on the character of the various emigrant flows which debouched upon these shores from the time of Cook's first survey through to 1945.

Lecturer: Terry Hearne
